The Family of Alice Mary Paxton

Like the Shields family whose large-scale migrations to East Tennessee in the late 18th and early 19th centuries made of them what can accurately be termed a southern family, the Paxtons, despite early settlement in the areas of north central Maryland and adjacent areas of south central Pennsylvania, are—certainly from a numerical standpoint—also chiefly a southern family. Significant migrations of the Maryland/Pennsylvania Paxtons occurred in the early and middle eighteenth century into the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, principally into Rockbridge County, whose seat is Lexington. While Alice Mary Paxton, who married John Sanford Shields, was a member of a family line remaining in Maryland, the broader family groups to which both she and her husband belonged are, in their early American generations, predominantly southern in their regional identity.

In the following pages the general origins of the Paxton family in America are discussed, and available data concerning the members of Alice Mary Paxton's immediate family is provided. Information given below on the broader Paxton family has been obtained from several published sources, most comprehensive of which is The Paxtons, a work published in 1903 by William M. Paxton. Similarly, information and vital statistics on the immediate line of Alice Mary Paxton come from several sources which include most particularly: J. Arthur Boyd, a descendant of Emma Paxton; Betty Paxton Lawver, a descendant of Robert Chase Paxton; and Lauren Kilmer and Margaret Kietzman, both descendants of Helen Ruth Paxton.

Origin of the Paxtons

Records of an early Paxton family are found in both England and Scotland, but the family is regarded as predominantly Scottish, with particular concentrations in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries found in and around Berwickshire, Scotland. Oral family tradition holds that much earlier the Paxtons were an offshoot of the Scottish clan MacLeod, whose two major divisions—MacLeod of Lewis and MacLeod of Harris—traditionally occupied the two Outer Hebrides islands bearing the Lewis and Harris names, and whose common seat is at Dunvegan on the Isle of Skye. (For many decades in the present century, the high-profile chief of the clan MacLeod in Scotland was Dame Flora MacLeod of Dunvegan.)

At some point in the seventeenth century, fleeing from religious persecution in Scotland, members of the Paxton family migrated to northern Ireland. With Scottish ancestry, but with generations born—and presumably intermarrying with Irish stock—in Ireland, the Paxtons of these lines are properly termed "Scotch-Irish." Later migrations of Paxtons to America in the eighteenth century came chiefly from these transplanted family members in Ireland, with several migrant families known to have settled in the southern Pennsylvania area of present-day Adams County, originally a part of Lancaster County.

From Pennsylvania several Paxton families (immigrant generations or their offspring, or possibly both) made further migrations into what is today Rockbridge County, Virginia, in the middle Shenandoah Valley, in and around the city of Lexington. At the time of their migrations, Rockbridge was still part of the vast tract known as Augusta County, which extended westward through unsurveyed regions to the Mississippi River. The descent of these central Virginia Paxtons has included a number of persons prominent in the protestant ministry and the practice of law. Those remaining in Pennsylvania included a greater than average number who also were in the professions, particularly the ministry and in medicine.

Meanwhile, those members of the first and second generations of Paxtons remaining in Pennsylvania—principally Adams and York Counties and adjacent areas of Maryland, largely Frederick County—were in all probability the progenitors of the family line of which Alice Mary Paxton was a member. The precise genealogy of this line is not clearly established, although a strong circumstantial case can be made for one particular line of descent which is commonly claimed in family genealogies. This genealogy holds that one Samuel Paxton, born about 1670 in Ireland and a son of James Paxton "of Ireland," together with sons John and Thomas (and possibly other children), migrated to the Pennsylvania colony about 1730. The immigrant son Thomas married in Virginia about 1746 and had both a son and a grandson named Samuel Paxton. His line is believed to have been carried forth entirely in Virginia. Thomas's brother John, also an immigrant from the family's adopted homeland of Ireland, married Elizabeth Alexander, apparently in Pennsylvania. His early children, who included Samuel, Mary, Joseph, and Elizabeth, appear to have been born in Pennsylvania or nearby areas of Maryland, with some of the elder ones apparently remaining there after the family's migration southward. John and Elizabeth Alexander Paxton resettled from Pennsylvania into the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, joining other Paxton migrants to Rockbridge County, and there had their later children, who included John, William, and Thomas.

Other ancestral possibilities exist, among them (1) a John Paxton of Berwickshire, Scotland, who migrated to America in the late 17th century, and (2) Hugh Paxton, who came from Ireland to America in 1674, settling first in Maryland and later in Pennsylvania; he had two wives, Grace and Martha, and at least three children, John, Ann, and Elizabeth.

It is probably most reasonable and logical to believe, however, that Samuel Cornell Paxton, father of Alice Mary Paxton (Shields), was a son or grandson of one of the elder sons of John and Elizabeth Alexander Paxton—who included Samuel and Joseph. This is not documented, but is a reasonable conclusion given the chronology, the recurrence of family names, the apparent absence from the area of other unidentified Paxtons, and the geographic locations involved. Whatever the actual ancestry of Alice Mary Paxton, however, she clearly was part of the family group which migrated from Scotland to Ireland in the early seventeenth century and which subsequently migrated from Ireland to Pennsylvania in the early 1730s.
